On the date of the occurrence the American man-of-war Nipsic was absent at Tutuilla, and there was American vessel at Apia. Captain Colly of the Constitution had only any attempt to board his vessel, declaring that he would shoot any man putting his foot on her deck without his permission. The Germans, after some further parleying, withdrew. When the Constitution drifted on a reef in the harbor and was wrecked, her crew was rescued by the crew of the Nipsie, which was one mile away at the time. The Failure of the Joint Convention Seem Likely to Breed Trouble Between Opera-

COLUMBUS, O., March 18. Trouble between the operators and miners seems inevitable since the failure of the joint convention to agree upon a scale of prices at the meeting in this city, and it is likely to start in Ohio before the lapse of many days. At Salineville there is already a difference as to the screens in use, and a prominent officer of the National Progressive Union said last night that it was more than probable that a double strike would be inaugurated there to maintain the present scale of prices and to force the operators to use the regulation screens. He was asked if a strike was inaugurated in this State if it would not give the Indiana operators an immense advantage over those in Ohio in supplying the great market of the Northwest, and in this connection the officer made an important statement. This matter had been considered, he said, by the miners, and in order to prevent the result, the decision had been arrived at in the event of a strike in Ohio to withdraw all the union men from the mines of Indiana, and lessen the competitive powers of the operators by curtailing the out-put. The officers of the union generally anticipate trouble during the present season, but express a willingness to do all possible to avoid a clash between operators an miners.

CAPTAIN DAWSON.

The Noble Life Let Out by the Debanches Murderer, Dr. McDow—How His Cool-ness and Courage on the Night of the Earthquake Saved Charlecton.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 19 .- A gentleman, whose identity may not be dis-closed, told a correspondent that he knew the contents of the paper signed and sealed by Miss Smith, "the short, white woman in black," of Policeman Gordon's story. This paper, he says, contains the statement that Miss Smith was in Dr. McDow's house at the time of the shooting; that she heard a pistolshot in the office, followed by a fearful scream; that she rushed down to the office and saw Captain Dawson sitting on a chair gasping for breath. He saw her, "For God's sake bring me some water." She ran up-stairs for the water and when she returned she found the door locked and could not secure admittance.

The strongest proof of Captain Dawson's hold upon the affections of his asociates was in the bridling of their wrath against his slayers. What he taught most earnestly and fought for most courageously during his lifetime was respect for law and opposition to all . When the first whisper ran through the multitude gathered in front of the murderer's house that Captain Dawson's dead body was the mystery concealed behind those closed blinds, the old South Carolina verdict of "lynch him" was written in every face. It was not the iron bars of the juil which saved the murderer that night, but the multitude's remembrance that only the law could arenge the death of Captain Dawson. Captain Dawson has been called the only sane man in Charleston during the earthquake. He rushed from his house-which a shock had torn in twain-for his office, whose walls threatened every moment to fall apart, and thought of nothing else until the regular issue of his paper was in the press. The appearance of the News and Courier as usual in the morning so astonished and reassured the people that they gathered eir scattered wits together and profited by the example set them. To this day they declare that Captain Dawson's courage that night saved Charleston. His moral courage survived the severest test. He was opposed to every form of lawlessness, and when all the rest of South Carolina upheld the dueling code, he denounced it. He was challenged; refused to accept; endured for years reproaches of cowardice; maintained his point, and fin-
